6/23(二)/ DAY 05-Full-day Machu Picchu Tour-Return to Cusco

Machu Picchu Day Tour

Arrange Huayna Picchu Hike: Climb to the summit of the Inca giant and overlook the 360-degree panoramic view of the ruins (total duration: 3.5 hours, difficulty level: ★★★★★).

Daily visits are limited to a set number of participants.

Huayna Picchu Mountain, is of moderate difficulty, with several steep slopes within the scenic area. If you find the climb challenging, you may choose to depart later and meet the group at the entrance to the scenic area before entering Machu Picchu for the tour. After the guided tour concludes, you may explore the Machu Picchu ruins at your leisure.

(No refunds will be given for those who do not participate in the Huayna Picchu Mountain tour. This attraction is part of the group ticket.)

The Machu Picchu attraction is suitable for the general public to visit.

Lunch will be specially arranged at the only restaurant at the entrance to Machu Picchu Mountain, where you can enjoy a variety of Inca dishes in the comfort of one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Walk to the train station and return to Cusco town. Board the luxurious vintage-style train named after Hiram Bingham.

This train is operated by the Belmond Group, which manages the Orient Express, in partnership with Peru Rail, and is considered the most luxurious passenger service between Cusco and Machu Picchu today. As the train pulls into the station, you can already hear the traditional sounds of Inca flutes and guitars echoing through the station. On the platform, a small bar has been temporarily set up for passengers, offering champagne and beverages. A well-dressed, friendly attendant promptly hands you a glass of champagne and says, "Welcome aboard the Belmond Hiram Bingham Machu Picchu Train."

6/24(三)/ DAY 06-Inti Raymi (Sun Festival) Full-day Tour

Today, you will experience a full-day tour of the Inca civilization's Sun God Festival. (Please apply sunscreen, bring sunglasses, and an umbrella.)

When people think of Peru, many associate it with the "ancient Inca civilization," whose mystique is one of the country's most captivating attractions. The term "Inca" in Peru originally referred to "descendants of the sun." The Incas believed that the sun god Inti was their ancestor and the most important and highest deity. For the agrarian Incas, the sun controlled crop yields, providing sunlight for crops to thrive and ensuring bountiful harvests. The sun also illuminated daily life, dispelling darkness. However, on the winter solstice (June 24), when the sun is farthest from Earth and daylight is shortest, the Incas held the "Sun Festival" to pray for the sun's return to Earth. This tradition has been passed down to this day, with such grand scale that the Sun Festival (Inti Raymi) has become the second-largest traditional festival in South America.

Today, in addition to experiencing the Inca festival, you can also visit Cusco depending on your schedule: Cusco was the capital of the Incas before the Spanish invasion and colonization, and it still preserves many ancient palaces, temples, fortresses, stone walls, and churches that are remnants of Inca culture:

1. Qorikancha: This former Inca palace was converted into a Spanish-style church after the Spanish invasion. Although the palace no longer retains its original appearance, the intricate masonry techniques used in its construction remain awe-inspiring.
2. Sacsayhuaman Fortress: Explore the majestic ancient Inca fortress, enjoy a breathtaking panoramic view of Cusco, and discover the surrounding ruins.

* If there is insufficient time today or if the group members feel tired, the visit can be rescheduled for the next day.

Regarding today's lunch arrangements, since the Sun Festival celebration lasts nearly 7 hours and spans 2-3 different sites, and with over 2,000 domestic and international visitors annually, the large number of visitors makes everyone eager to enter the site early to participate in the long-awaited Inca ceremony. Therefore, today's lunch will be a simple boxed meal to allow visitors from afar to continuously experience this rare annual Inca event.

If guests choose to dine at a restaurant, factors such as travel time, distance, and traffic restrictions may result in a loss of approximately 2–3 hours. By selecting this option, you agree to this time loss and acknowledge that our agency bears no responsibility for any discrepancies in the itinerary.

Lunch will depart the scenic area around 10:00 AM to head to the restaurant. All group members must be seated at the viewing platform of the Sacsayhuaman Fortress by 1 PM.

6/25(四)/ DAY 07-Sacred Valley or Rainbow Mountain

Depending on the health condition of the group members as they acclimate to the high altitude and the departure time of the group, we will decide whether to stay in Cusco to visit attractions or proceed to higher-altitude attractions in the Sacred Valley.

1. Alpaca Farm : Feed and interact closely with alpacas and llamas, and watch an alpaca shearing show. Admire the ancient weaving crafts of Andean women, learn about traditional natural dyes, weaving techniques, and art.
2. Cusco Cathedral : The most important church in Cusco, blending Spanish Renaissance architectural style with indigenous stone carving art. Cusco's enchanting nights, filled with Western romantic charm. We have prepared a food map for you to explore freely, enjoy various cuisines, and experience the charm of the town.

Visit the mysterious Sacred Valley , once the largest grain-producing region during the Inca period, featuring ancient abandoned terraces and structures. We will traverse the Andes Mountains, experiencing what a utopian paradise truly is. Along the way, there are numerous excellent photo spots offering breathtaking views of the untouched natural beauty that defies description.

High-altitude visits to the Maras Salt Flats & Moray Terraces

Maras Salt Flats : Explore the Inca salt flats and traditional salt-making techniques (closed during heavy rain; alternative itinerary will be arranged)

Moray Terraces : An archaeological site, this was an agricultural research station during the Inca period, serving as the Incas' agricultural laboratory.

Alternative Option: Rainbow Mountain (Vinicunca) Day Trip

(Participants in the Rainbow Mountain day trip will automatically forfeit the original planned tour of the Sacred Valley and Cusco town.)

(Departure at 4 AM, 3-hour drive. Hiking takes approximately 2–4 hours.)

※The highlight of Rainbow Mountain is located at an altitude of 5,100 meters, which is a high-altitude region. Participants must purchase travel insurance and provide a copy of their travel safety insurance policy, as well as prepare personal items for cold weather, safety, health, and medication items. Participants in this tour acknowledge that they are fully aware of the itinerary and agree to the tour company's mountain climbing arrangements. They must promptly report any personal conditions. If failure to report such conditions results in inability to proceed or other issues, participants will be solely responsible.

Today, we have specially arranged a one-day tour of Rainbow Mountain, allowing visitors to experience the beauty of the mountain scenery, with stunning views before their eyes. Hike to the summit of Rainbow Mountain (Vinicunca), a hike of approximately 4 hours, passing through picturesque villages, herds of camels and llamas, and admiring the majestic views of the Ozanate Glacier. This mountain is part of the Auzangate peak in the Andes Mountains. The round-trip drive from Cusco takes 5-6 hours, plus 4-5 hours of hiking up and down the mountain. The hiking trail starts at a parking lot at an elevation of 4,326 meters and ends at an elevation of 5,020 meters, with a elevation difference of 700 meters. The breathtaking, colorful mountain views stretch for approximately 10 kilometers. Along the way, local tour operators offer assistance with mountain climbing services. Travelers who need it can ride horses up the mountain.

(The cost for horseback riding is approximately USD 40-45, paid on-site to the horse guide.)

Participants joining the Rainbow Mountain tour will automatically replace their original booked itinerary.

A private vehicle will be arranged to Rainbow Mountain, with a dedicated guide accompanying the group.

The Cusco tour will be guided in Chinese, with transfers arranged from Lima.

Round-trip flights, short-term accommodation before and after the tour, and meals are not included.

6/26(五)/ DAY 08-Cusco-La Raya-Puno by Altiplano Train

Depart on the brand-new 2017 PERURAIL TITICACA luxury train to Puno.

We will ride the scenic railway train and enjoy the magnificent views as we cross the Andes Mountains. On board the train, you can enjoy delicious meals and live traditional entertainment performances. The train is like a mobile restaurant, where passengers can enjoy a delicious lunch and afternoon tea in spacious seats and at dining tables while admiring the breathtaking views of the Andes Mountains outside the windows. There will also be dance and music performances, creating a lively atmosphere.

The train arrives in Puno in the evening, and we will check into the Puno hotel.

6/27(六)/ DAY 09-Puno-Lake Titicaca Tour

Lake Titicaca is known as the “Little Switzerland of South America” and there is a floating island on the lake that has been floating for hundreds of years. After breakfast, depart from the pier in Puno Bay and arrive at ▲Uros Island in approximately 30 minutes. The island features several reed houses and watchtowers, constructed entirely from reeds and secured to the lake bed with bamboo stakes. The islanders who reside here continue to uphold traditional Peruvian ways of life. The Uros Islanders often paddle around the waterways in small boats made of reeds, called “totora,” creating the unique landscape of Lake Titicaca. Currently, there are still over 40 floating islands in the lake, each of varying sizes. The smaller ones house around ten people, while the larger ones have schools, post offices, and shops! On Uro Island, we can learn how the islanders use reeds to build their houses and boats, and how they live on the reed floating islands—this is the most primitive way of life, without modern electrical systems or gas facilities. Additionally, we can admire the beautiful scenery of South America’s highest inland lake, with its clear sky reflecting the turquoise waters, fresh air, and serene environment, resembling a dreamlike paradise.

Taquile Island is a three-hour journey. This is a true natural island, and the purpose of visiting is to explore the unique customs and traditions of its residents. In simple terms, the island’s residents have their own unique social management system. The island’s main sources of income from tourism are the sale of woven goods and the operation of restaurants. The men’s work also involves weaving items such as hats, clothing, scarves, and bags. All woven goods on the island are collected at a central location, priced, and sold to tourists (at a fixed price), with the proceeds distributed by their organization.

The unique patterns on these woven items are strictly regulated, so you can’t find these distinctive designs anywhere else.

6/28(日)/ DAY 10-Puno (JUL)-Lima Airport (LIM)- United States (return to home country)

If time permits(requires a 2-hour break) (no additional fees or refunds), we will make a detour to visit Sillustani.

In the Titicaca Lake region, the indigenous Colla people constructed numerous cylindrical standing tomb towers, with the largest and best-preserved ones located in Sillustani. To reach Sillustani, the cylindrical tomb tower complex, the earliest estimates suggest it dates back over a thousand years. Despite the rise and fall of empires, this tradition was preserved, and even during the Inca period, the Titicaca region continued to practice tower burial customs. From the stonework craftsmanship, it is also easy to distinguish the chronological order. During the Inca period, the stone surfaces were laid flat with tight joints; whereas the stone blocks of pre-Inca burial towers were much rougher and less stable. These historically significant burial towers, after centuries of weathering, have mostly been shattered or reduced to their foundation stones, with only a few remaining intact.

Return to Lima, have dinner, then head to the airport for an international flight back to your beloved home. End of the itinerary.

(If you are departing tonight and your flight is the next day, please contact our agency if you need accommodation arrangements. Accommodation and airport transfers are additional services and are not included in the quotation.)
