DAY 3 Barcelona

Parc Güell (admission included): Park Güell is a fine example of garden design among Gaudi's many works. The man-made landscape here looks more natural than the natural landscape, and the use of color and line is also used to the extreme. A walk through the park is a great way to immerse yourself in realism, and you'll also see the whole city from the height of the park.

Sagrada Família (ticket included): a masterpiece by the talented artist Gaudí, not only listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, but also a sacred place for many tourists. The three facades of the church are presented in a grand and coordinated manner, with clean lines, reliefs on the walls of the church doors showing the story of the Bible, like living creatures, and the design of the interior of the church inspired by caves, mountains, flowers and animals adds a mysterious rhythm to the church.

La Pedrera: The wavy exterior is made up of white stone facades, twisted iron bars and iron balustrades, and wide windows that allow the imagination to be used.

La Rambla is one of the most well-known shopping streets in Barcelona and one of the sightseeing spots in Barcelona that many tourists will surely put on their agenda.
